To the Editors of the Louisville Journal:

For some time past we have expected to see one issue made with the "Democratic Constitutional-Union-Conservative-Lam delighted to-see-you-Captain-Hiues" party, but our waiting has been vair; and, in obedience to our desire to see the race made on all "its merita," we would call general attention to the very important fact that little or nothing has as wet been said by the opposing aspirants in the coming elections as to their position in regard to a subject which far more nearly concerns the weal and future status of Kentucky as a State than o the defunct negro and much bruised sirerdment questions, and that is as to the reject of the expatriation law passed by the Kentucky Legislature of 1862.

Let fils issue be clearly and promptly made, and there are to-day many truly loyal men throughout the State, esjoled for the present by be "nuck cry and little wool" watchword of 'integer, ninger," into practical co-operation in the time could be resulted.

mileger, ninger." Into practical co-operation with this so called Democratic party, who will shake off the dast of their garments upon it, and array themselves in therauks of those who, thring the ficre etrife and fier trisls of the part fenr years have upborne the nation and the ration's cause, and to whose sturdy and resisters courage we are indebted for the nation's criumph and existence.

It is an undeniable truth that many good and loval men have been unwittingly betraved into whiteled partienaship and concert with that class in our State who, during all these bitter years, have been the direct foes to the Government, and in open and admitted sympathy with those in desperate rebellion against it. It is a fact patent to the knowledge of every one, that the recont "Southern" element in Kentucky composes by far the largest portion of this new-spawned "Democratic party" which, officered by leaders clad in the rusty habiliments of 1861, asying idolatrons featily to the same blind gods who have ruled the Southern States for a decade past, is endeavoring to exhume the creeds and cellems upon which rest the sodded crimson and trampled horrors of ten score battle fields, and to breathe anew the breath of veusmous life into those monster errors and fratricidal differences which the American armies havelist been throttling to the death. Urged on by a captions and pragmatic and nurrelenting and leepless animosity to the Government, to the magnanimons forbearance of which they to-day owe all that they have and are, they are stirring up this furrons political warfare in the State, not because of any innate sentiment of truthin particism—not from any gentine respect for the Constitution—not that they for a moment believe that the stone can be rolled from the cavern wherein dead slavery is lying—not that hey care one lota for the negro in the sharact, but merely, simply, and only because they extend it to get rid of this vexed onestion for-over, and as the policy and as the desire of the Government to get rid of this vexe ins violence of their success, never again hrow their elective weight in favor of any man who has not from first to last been an acknowledged "Southern sympathizer."

To be sure, meny men may cry out upon this almost who iesale sesertion in regard to the past status and complexion of an entire party; may contend that "we are hotest in our views, and only opposed to what we deem unconstitutional sampations of power." Surely, surely, this mer-doment question is one purely and strictly maritualized in all its breadth and its every coning, but, without discussion on this point, see would reply, look at the men with whom are now in hermonlous concert, and in whose interests you are engaged; contrast your ast relations with them and your present practical fraternization. Delude yourselves by shatever chicanery you man, you are to-day arre of ilme it will naturally and necessaril me to pass that you will regard them as you litical and personal allies.

laws for those of us who have stood by the Government in sometime and in storm.

So far as we personally are interested we would, were it in our power to choose, much prefer that of the two classes the right of franchise should be exercised by those who, taking help lives in their hands, have bravely battled against us in the open field, rather than hy bace who, under the smooth garb and softened title of "Southern sympathizers," have remained within our borders to eting with adder tergues, and betray with oliv words, and who are to-day mainly responsible for the evils which are upon us. Unfortunately, however, bette is no selection, although by no rule of ethics, or strict construction of cavil and common law, has either class a right to any voice in the control of the affairs either of the Common wealth or of the Republic.

Only the too generous forbearance of the Government grants tolerance to the latter class. Hence, we must deal with the matter according to its actual condition—accept the only alternative—and apply the only practicable preventive. Hence, it becomes us that we see to it, erait to too late, that under the gulse of "anti-amendment candidates"—whilst we are bequiled into a spirit of carelessness, or a lethargy of indifference—men are not sent to till the state effices, who, by a sweeping repeal of this Expatriation law, will let in a fivol-tide upon our future elections. Wenderful paradox would it be to find laws prescribed and statutes hald down for the carried heroes, brorzed veterans who have followed "the flag" from the Ohio "to the sea," we those whom they have defeated at such precious cost of brither's blood and nation's resume. We are content that when they have clearly shown the spirit of sincere repentance and serious reform, that, one by one, separately and singly, the Legislature of Kentucky shall take action in each particular case according to its divers merits and demerits, and restore or withheld the rights of full citizenship. But we protest in the names of instice, prudence, and wisdom, of the bero-dead, and the ploriene living, of the bloody past and the hopeful inture against a broad-handed act of ejecalment, whereby the detested murder-steeped guerills, in common with the Ce-feder-te-soldier, all classes and types of enemies to the Government, are placed upon an equal footing with the Federal soldier and the loyal citizen, and admitted to share every privilege, and eloose beneath every altar-stone of the Commonwealth, as if rebellion was a virtue to be rewarded and treason no damning iniquity. Let our laws protect them in all their equitable lights of person and property; let no man malineat or misuse them, but in God'shame, and for good government's sake, let them feel that hey have gone astray after strange and menatrous idols, have participated in a most causeless, wicked, and unjustifiable rebellion, and that especially favored and highly fortunate may they deem themselves it in five, or in ten, or in a hundred years, as the case may be, they are gone a Wenderful paradox would it be to find laws

What a mether of forms and faces crowd the usiness thoroughfares during the day! Nons who have visited this Great Metropolis will ever forget the rush and seramble on Broadwax. Veticles of every description crowd the street from pawement to pawement, rendering the crosling not only extremely difficult int dangerons. And there is no end to the throng on the pavements; hour after hour the never-failing stream of people flows by. All is hurry, jam, and confusion. In sitting at an open window down town, and viewing the street for a single half hour, the mind actually grows bewildered, faint, and sick. The stranger, in a few hours at beet, must grow weary of the crowd and thred of the commetion, when it is refreshing to take the care, and, in one of the far, up-town streets and a partial relief from the noise and busile. To analyze sil of the different characters to be met with in New York in a single day would require the ethody of a lifetime.

But why attempt to describe what so often has been described before. I am weary even with thinking of the jam on Broad way, and the crazy crowds on Wall, Broad, and other streets. I look about me for some relief, and my eye rests upon the well known print of the Journal—the pajer lying upon the table to my left. I have read every like in it before, but reach forward and grasp it to glance over its columns, and refraps find food in them for musing thought. The tirst words that attract my attention are those in large type, at the head of an article, "Gen. Buell—the Truth of Hetory."

The General speaks kindly of those who conspired to crush him. He spoke of the brilliant actions of General Sherman in highest terms, and said that he always had felt the warmest risendebly for him. When Sherman's famous letter in relation to the battle of Shilloh appeared, in which he labored to rob Buell of the boners of the day, he was deeply surprised, but had forgiven him long ago, as the statements in that letter were so wide of the truth that they were apparent to every officer and soldier who fought on the field. He believed that Sherman and within hastly, and now regrettes having done so, therefore he freely forgave him lie claimed that Sherman was the hero of the war—that his campaign through Georgia and the Carolinas was without a parallel. General Baeli's now at Saratoga, spending a brief seasou. The shades of evening are falling and every treet car is crowded to overflowing, bearing yeary men home from their places of business. Listen! a stream of nusic crimes floating uproom the street below. I draw my chair to the open window and look down upon the wanderleg inhartics. As I look into their faces I know that they were born beneath the sunnyskles of Italy, even if their strains were not of that Isad of glorious song. Brother and sister, orphane, perhaps, yet what made them lonely wanderers. Why did they leave their own sunny land for the cold skies and colder hearts of Balel New York? Did they dream of a laud of golden promise, and did they cross the ocean to ind it thes? Sad world is this, and—but the song has ceased. The little girl lifts her dark yes to my face—I can see their brilliance, though the twilight is deepening! Here—I reach out my hand and a few pennies fall through the air. With a dextrous movement the young girl catches them in her tambourine, and, making a low contresy, takes her brother's arm and moves slowly down the street with with her blind charge, to sing and play beneath such the remaind of the suns of the blind boy, the pale faced girl, and the sad sweet song. Continued absence from Lebanon has presented my responding, until now, to severate or communications which appeared the Lonisville Democrat, on the 21th instance the head of "A Siander Refuted," it the Lonisville Democrat, on the 21th inst, under the head of "A Slander Rehitted," intended to answer charges brought by me against Aaron Harding, in my letter to the Lonisville Journal of the 21th of June last. Even now I cannot see that there is any necessity of answering these seversi cards, because they do not in the least refuse the charge that Harding advised "the preparation of a list which should bear the frames of self men who would not vote for him, and which should be filed with the judges of election everywhere, with the nuderstanding that no man whose name was on that list should vote, unless he took the osth prescribed by himself or one containing the same if e.s." Whether Harding did or did not deny this charge at Splingfield and Lebanon amounts to nothing. I have in my possession letters from good menin Spingfield, in which I am sustined in my charge as to his specch at that place. If he denied the charge at Lebanon, I certainly did not hear him, and made my assertion after consulting with several responsible men. But whether he denied it or not, the charge is true and I retirate it.

More than this, Aaron Harding knows that I but state the truth when I reiterate in the show that list place are circumstantial evidences that show that list place are circumstantial evidences that show that list had my was sufficed in the shows. the charge is true and I reiterate it.

More than this, Asron Harding knows that I but state the truth when I reiterate my charges. There are circumstantial evidences that show that Harding was guilty of these charges. In the Fourth District there are fourteen counties, in several, if not all of these counties, lists of suspected men were prepared and filed with Judges of Elections. Now, it has never been charged that I had anything to do with preparing lists for any but Marlon county; is it not remarkably strauge that these counties should all have adopted the same plan of action? Must there not have been one father only to the idea of black lists? And who is better capacitated to be that father than Aaron Harding? Harding was basily cauxascing the district, and was in every county. Who has a better chance to see that his pet Idea was executed? He did not hesitate to ask about his oath at many laces; why besitate to ask about his oath at many laces; why besitate to advise other countymen, as he did me? So far as the list in Green county is concerned, I have this to say: there is no man in Green county more respectable or responsible than D. Terrii. The letter from him which I published was genuine. Mr. Tovles'seatatement, If carefully examined means nothing. Who prepared the list? How does Mr. Towies know that Harding was absent from home when the list was prepared? How does he know that the list was prepared in the list in the list

Col. Carllie or Mr. Towles directly under or Harding's name I cannot account for it.

Will the friends of Harding please expisin why he sent copies of this oath to a prominent man in Green county by his own son, unless he hnew that the lists were being prepared, and that his oath would be needed?

The means that Harding adopted to secure his twn election should prepare us to find him delasing himself by vikiperation and abuse of the Federal anthorities while in Congress. If a cardidate for Congress could condescend to prepare oaths which would defeat his opponent, is certainly could condescend from the high position of a Congressiman to appease his own anity and self-conceit by hurling the epithets of "triant," "usurper," and "despot" at statesmen and patriote, and at the legitimate head of a Government which tolerated him. Who could donbt that a man of this character would be two modest (oh, mrdesty, where is thy birsh?) to vote against centuring or expelling the mun who declared that "Not one dollar or one mun, I swear by the Eternal, will I vote for this inernal, this stupendons folly—more stupendous than ever disgraced any civilized people on the Government to be a crime when the question is between lovalty or treason?" What honest patiot would expect him to be brave enough to vote against Long's Richmond Commissioner recointion? What Federal officer would expect him to have heart enough to appreciate the sacifices that they had made in battling for a Government which he had denounced? What Federal soldier would expect sympathy and appreciation or pay from him?

Asson Harding was elected by the people of the Fourth District in 1865 to represent them.

Aaron Harding was elected by the people of the Fourth District in 1865 to represent them. They did not expect him to be a stumbling block (a small one, thank God!) in the way of the Government. They did not expect him, in order to satlate his inveterate thirst for billingspate, to turn factionist, negro-wrishiper, current denouncer of the Federal Administration, and thus destroy the influence that he should have had as Congressman. They did not expect him to nearly involve them in war, as he did in 1861, by his appeals to the passions of those men at home, to whom he spoke. They little expected that he would attempt to shield those guerrilla scoundrels who skulked belind the Federal army to rob and steal and murder as he did by voting against Hon. R. C. Echencks's bill, which provides for the "more speedy punkhment of guerrillas." In true hiney expected much of him—fish, and never a stone! his splendid cornet band, the party took passage on the steamer Gen. Lytle. Our trip up the river was quite interesting, as the boat was crowded with passengers. Our boat left the wharf Immediately behind the St. Nicholas, with Haley's band playing a soul-stirring air. We, however, caucht up with the St. Nicholas lefore we got to Jeffersonville, and the ladies waved their handkerchiefs and the passengers shouted, fairly drowning the shrill tones of Haley's cornet. But we landed, and soon started ont after her, caught her, and passed her under way at Twelve mile Island. All this time Haley and his accommodating corps of musicians entertained us with some of the most delightuni music ever heard. We arrived at the pleasant little village of Warsaw early in the evening, and were well received by the Committee of Arrangements. Next morning we repaired to the Court-house yard where fine-shady arbors were constructed. Gen. Flunell drst spoke some two hours, and was followed by Gen. Caiev, of Ohlo. They both made fine, telling speeches. All the citizens of the county were present, and as they received such good advice, I think little Gallatin will come out all light on next Monday. All passed off quietly, the crowd at parting giving three cheers for the army of the Union, and three more for the Constitutional Amendment. It was altogether a day long to be remembered. About five o'clock in the evening the shrill whistle of the Gen. Lytle announced to our party that it was time to get aboad. All went off for the boat, with Haley leading the column. For these eminent and all important traste, excepting the distinguished gottleman I have named, there are no asplarants but rebels, two of whom—Wm. R. It were well to let the Government, the people, and the world know who Mr. William Johnson is, politically; for I am sure, if the knowledge awsken not a serious, honest thought in alarm for the State in the hands of such a zealot, thew mirth must certainly triumph over the inclience picture that Mr. Johnson presents, when his boldness dates to aspire to a responsible office, basing his claims upon his petilant career since the commoncement of the war. A face less hard than now Bill Johnson's would limbs at the scheme. The Butler-Porter-Fort-Fisher quarrel appears to have been settled and the tomahawk burled. Gen. Butler and Admiral Porter have been observed on the street, and on the President's ground, arm in arm, and in most pleasant, confidential converse.

A very general misapprehension exists as to the number of pardons granted to late rebels, under the Amnesty Proclamation. Newspaper paragraphs cause this misunderstanding by carelessness in statements that pardons have only been granted when petitions have only been recommended by a State Governor or the Atecommended by a State Governor or the Aborney General. [Special Correspondence of the Loniaville Journal, ] LETTER FROM NEW YORK.

New York, July 31, 1865.

What a wilderness of people, a tarbnient sea of human forms, is to be found in New York, the great metropolis of the New World! When the first rays of the rising sun gild the lottle church-spiries, the tread of feet is heard upon the pavements, and the air is full of the hum of volces, the jar of machinery, and the rattle of vehicles over the stony streets. The sun sinks below the dim ontline of the western sky as it below the the notion and confusion, leaving the crowded streets to the light of the moon and the watch of the stars. Dark clouds may observe the sky, set the streets of New York are never still. The gas burns brightly in a myriad of lamps, and the rumble of wneels, the hum of volces, and the bread of weary feet are heard. And what a fearful record of sorrow, crime, and wee is made upon the scroll of time with each revolution of the globe. Euch rising sam lights up the page, and should we read, the is np the page, and should we read, the d would grow dizzy and the heart sick. In and Jerhaps find food in them for musing thought. The first words that attract my attention are those in large type, at the head of an article, "Gen. Buell—the Truth of Hastory." I read the article carefully through, and feel I ke thanking "Flat Justitia" for his detense of the into of the batto of Shiloh. The silly story that Gen. Buell was prevented from abandoning Nashville to the rebels in September, 1892, by the irrmess of Gov. Johnson, I thought had been forgotten long ago. It is too absurd to be credited for a moment. A few days ago I met Gen. Buell, and had a long conversation with him. As I had recently arrived from Kentneky, it was but natural that he should refer to Lonisville and his early campaign. In reference to the Nashville story he said that he was surprised that it should be revived at this late day, especially after he had given it an official denial. He regarded it as loo silly and contemptible to be worthy of further notice. Although the General has been shamefully attacked and abused by his enemics, he does not fear but that justice will yet be endered him by the people. Time will vindicate him, and his name will go down to posterity as one of the firmest patriots and ablest Generals of the war. Facts have been strangely perverted, and, for a time, a blight rested upon his name, but when we are permitted to see the case in its true light, we will accord to no General a blighter cereer.

Last Friday morning a young lady residing just beyond Middlefeld, while walking through the monntains on a visit to some friends in the east district of this town, was enddenly set upon by three persons in scidler's uniform, who dragged her into the woods near at hand, where they stripped the clothing entirely from her bedy, and the three in succession ravished her person. After gratifying their lusts, the inhumsn fiends left their victim insensible, and in a perfectly nude state. When consciousness had reluned, the unhappy girl discovered that her ravishers had carried away every article of her ravishers had carried away every article of her nudity, for more than an hour, and until nearly noon, when she succeeded in attracting its attention of a gentleman passing in a carringe, who quickly went to her assistance, covered fit raskedness as well as be was able with the between

Referring to North Carolina, it continues:

Warming Scypents.—Governor Holden, of North Carolina, has distinguished himself during his brief official career, by recommending the prominent revels of his State for pardon. An average of a hundred applications a day, received at Washington with his favorable indorsement, shows that revenge and arrogance form no part of his policy. But the traitors who have respect the advantages of his mercy, prove like scrpents, which, warmed to life in the bosom of a protector, turn to sting him. They have continued to oppose the Governor's policy, re-mact the leading measures of rebellion, and manage the State in the interest of public enemies. They declare themselves strong enough to overthrow Holden, and make one of their own stripe Governor. This is exceedingly annoving but not very dangerous. The rebels have shown their hands too soon and too bildly. North. Carolina is not rehabilitated, and will not be until it has been put beyond the power of these renegades to make mischief. Congress has absolute and final power, in passing upon any measures they may adopt. And if their action seems likely to prove daugerous, there is a short cut to security, known as martial law.

Is THE NEGRO FREE -This is a ques Is the Negro Free—This is a question which intimately concerns the people of the whole country, and especially the people of the South. By the proclamations of the President and the action of the civil and military authorities of the Government, the negro has been pronounced free, to all lineats and purposes and the people of the Southern States, with singular manimity, have accepted the declaration as a fixed and unchangeable fact, and propose to act it out in perfect good faith. All reasonable and reflecting men in the South admit, and frankly admit, that slavery is now and beneeforward extinguished; nor is there any disposition on the part of any of them to revive its existence is any form, for a single day or a single hour.—Richmond Whig.

In accordance with instructions I have care-ly examined the lead vein lying in Owen In accordance with instructions I have carefully examined the lead vein lying in Owen country, belonging to your company, and running acroes the lands belonging to Daniel Criswell, Hodgee & Lorance, and William Taylor. The vein is a well marked one, and crosses the Kentucky river a little more than a mile below the town of Graiz I has been opened supersicially at a number of points on both sides of the river. These openings occur along a line more than a mile in leugth—the vein having about the same width at nearly all the exposures. The vein, as I have said, is well marked, nearly vertical, and runs down through lower eilbrian rocks. These rocks are ilmestone and approximately horizontal. The vein varies, so far as exposed, from something less than a foot to two feet in thickness, averaging perhaps fifteen or twenty inches. Its salls are well defined. The vein itself occupies a fanit in the rocks, and is of great extent and depth. The material of the vein is made up of lead ore, zinc ore, heavy spar, and calc epsir. The heavy spar, or sulphate of baryta—here a heavy whitish or milky mineral—is the most abundant substance in the vein. This mineral, owing to its white color and weight, is ground and used with white lead as a paint. The calc spar, which is nothing more than pure crystalized limestone, occurs, mixed with the heavy spar, the two forming what is called the gangue of the ore. The lead ore, which hare is a suiphuret of lead, and is called the gangue of the ore. The lead ore, which hare is a suiphuret of lead, and is called galena, occurs exattered through the gangue, often showing, however, a tendency to collect in vertical sheets, either in the middle or at the sides of the vein. This ore will yield from 75 to 60 per cent of lead. The zinc occurs as zinc blende, and is less abundant than galena.
> Such are the leading features of this vein so far as they can be seen at present. It certainly is an luteresting and promising vein at the surface. Its outcorp appears to run for several miles acroes the cou son to think it of great depth. There is a solithickness of calcarlous and other rocks be these, which appear at the surface throughth the surface through the surface which the vein can run downward many hun-red feet. Some of these lower rocks are thown to be lead-bearing, and in Virginia, where they come to the surface, they furnish at ast one lead mine, which has been for years a nance of great wealth to all who have an in-rest in it. o the Editors of the Lousville Journal:

The Teachers' Association of Kentucky, which met in this place on last Tuesday, adjourned at 12 M., to meet again in Shelbyville on the 15th of June next. The attend nee was fully as large as was expected, delegates from teanty-five or thirty countles being present. The deliberations were harmonions throughout, and the interest manifested by the delegates was exceedingly gratifying to every friend of the cause of education. Various subjects were brought before the body for consideration, and ight before the body for consideration, and steresting discussions took place as to the best lan for accomplishing the objects contem-lated in the organization of the Association; nated in the organization of the association; ut as the proceedings will shortly be published an pamphlet form, those who feel interested an then read them complete.

This has been one of the warmest days ever experienced here; at any rate the heat is much more oppressive than mann! Notwithstanding the heat, the political contest is waged flercely as the day of election draws near. The anti-Amendment men pretend to be confident of electing their ticket in this county, but those persons whose of portunities are best for forming a correct estimate of the strength of the respective parties, say that if illegal rotes are excluded—if all who sided the rebuild in one ray or the other, or who field to avoid the dra tre kept from the polls, there will be no diffi-nity in electing the Amendment candidates by handseme majority. The question, however, will soon be decided.

PT W. A. PETERS. e are some happy moments in this lor And devolate world of ours, that well repay Of distant music, when we know not who Or whence the counds are brought from; and their Though brief is boundless. Halleck.

Oh how these moments come and go,
Like the lone sea's elient ebb and flow;
Or like the glad waves that kine the fond shore,
And roll back to occan to return no more. And as we stand watching along the gray beach.

And as we cannot be a received as they come within reach; The errects of bright moments the breakers bring in, We grasp all in vain for the prize we would win. And as we look back upon life's rushing river,

As we think of the moments that quickly have fied, To come back no more, like the arrow that's sped.

Oh. are there no moments but those that are gone To cheer with their gladness life's sad journey on? Give joy to the heart and a smile to the lin, As from their own sweetness life's nectar we'd sip?

In Testiment and caused the seal of the Commonwealth to be annexed. Done at Frankfort, this site day of June, 1965, and in the 74th year of the Commonwealth.

THOS. M. BRAMLETTE. And the fair angel Hope, with an unforeseen finger, le pointing us on to Eternity's goal, Where, forever, bright momente encircle the soul.

TRUE BEAUTY AND HOW TO KEEP IT!-She WAS the most levely woman I ever saw. Admirer of beauty as I am, in its every form, I found it impossible to keep my eyes off her face. I was glad when she spoke to me, for then I might look at her, but even when she addressed another, I kept gazing till ashamed of myself, for very now and then she turned with that quick. involuntary glance one gives when they feel that another's eyes are upon them, to most my persistent stare. "Pehaw," I said, "am I fascipersistent stare. "Pehaw," I said, "am I fascinated?" and, to make sure, I rose and left the LOUISVILLE TO CAIRO room. What was the charm in that face? I'll tell you. But first, those of my readers, who expect a glowing description of ripe, pouting lips, 'just made to be kissed," and wreathedin coquettish smiles, of rounded cheeks, whose neachy binom but served to heighten the purity f snowy neck and forehead, of youthful eyes dancing in light and happiness beneath curls of soft gleaming hair, had best skip over to the next column, for they will be disappointed. My centy was seventy years old. There was no shadow of tint on her cheek or brow- but the forehead was fair and smooth as a baby's-white and free from wrinkles as was her whole face except a faint tracery of lines about the mouth, and this was forgotten when the delicately chiseled lipe opened to a voice of silvery softness. whose every tone gave evidence that it had passed over crushed heart-blooms, as sucaly as a breath from the meadow tells that the mow-er has been there. The eye was mild and pleasant, and beaming with unusual intelligence. Of United States Military Railroads.

that I am sure, though I cannot now tell whether it was bine, black or hazel. There was no affectation of youthfulness, but added to a natural benignity of manner was an a y so cial bearing that made one not forget the verence due to years, but mingle largely with it a freedom not usually felt toward any except hose of one's own age and station. She was a long-time invalid, but you would never have sed that she knew the meaning of the word 'ache" from any allusion of her's to the subject. Yet she listened sympathizingly to the plaints of another, with many a word of hope and encouragement. She is the mother of many brave sons and fair daughters, who literally "rise up and call her blessed," in return for all the devotion and toll she has given them, and the heart of her husband did safely trust in her during all the years they journeyed together, which was till he wearled of his earth-armor and laid it off to join the ranks of the immortals. I knew she had passed through scenes such as we are told cometimes bleach the hair in a single night, and bring hopeless mildew to the woof of life; but there was that face, as placid as a lake on a summer night, and, like that lake, reflecting heaven above. She never could have elonged to that class of Christians (?) who, not daring to grumble directly at Him about the changes on its size and weight to fellow-traveler, in hopes He will take the hint and lighten it a trifle. No, she was po tient, hopeful, and cheerful, with a full trust that her chastisements as well as her blessings were from the hand of a loving Father, and that He would support and strengthen her under them. I have seen others who possessed this trust and love in a much larger degree, if we may judge by mere lip utterances, but it did it did not preserve their features in their infantile softness nor their dispositions in their infantile eweetness. This thought crossed my mind as I was remarking on the singular attiveness of face and manner of my aged friend, and I said to one who had known her ong and well, "I do not understand it: she has had much sickness and sorrow, yet she does not look half her years." "I do," was the practical answer; "she never frets." There it was in a nut-shell. Eureka! I cried in my heart. Coemetic, ambrosia, and universal reuvenator, mental, moral, spiritnal, and physical, without money and without price! Ho, all ye who are daily turning away from the too faithful mirror, with regret deeper than that you feel when looking into the sorrowful eyes of a friend you have injured, give this subject District 6. All military posts except Edge-deld north a moment's thought. Are there faint, of the Combertand River, in the State of Tennassee, the mouth? a tracery of network under the eyes and some incipient but decided corrugations on the forehead? Then n cause for alarm, for, though there are lotions for the whitening hair, moth-vanishers for the sering scomplexion, depllatory powders for the coarse lip and chin; for these sturdy sen tinels standing guard at the very portals of the heart agree to fright away every approach of the little winged god, there is no dismissal, no cure if it be not found in this simple recipe never free. You need not go to the other extreme and put on one of those insane, expressionless smiles worn by some faces and which are a thousand times worse than any quantity of wrinkles; but keep the heart cheerful and grateful till the electric happiness lightens up the very hairs on your head, and your features assume the appropriate look as natmally as a rose its color; so shall you be a nan at "eighty-two" with whom Poe's hero might have fallen in love even without his speccles, or had he been less near-sighted. Try it, you who are sighing over the passing away of youth, and with it youthful attractions. Heed this example of my perennial beauty, of whom there was nothing to say (and what more need be said?) than that, 'She never frets! Are not all the passive virtues expressed in that?
